SkinScription: Thermage

How does Thermage work?

To understand how Thermage works, it helps to know a little about how your skin works. The facial skin is made up of three distinct layers: a visible outer layer on the surface called the epidermis, a collagen-rich underlayer beneath the surface called the dermis, and an inner layer beneath the dermis called the subcutaneous layer (also known as the fat layer) that has a web of collagen fibres running through it.

As you age, collagen in these three layers breaks down and the skin on your face begins to sag and wrinkle. Naturally, treatments that work on just the surface can't do anything to restore the collagen in the dermis or the inner subcutaneous layer of your skin.

Thermage is the only non-invasive FDA approved procedure that tightens and renews your skin's collagen in all three layers. How? Thermage's unique Capacitive Radio Frequency (CRF) technology safely heats your skin's underlayer and the web of collagen in the inner layer, causing an immediate tightening as well as improved tone and texture. The Thermage treatment improvements will continue and become even more noticeable for four to six months following treatment, due to new collagen growth.

"Thermage - I've looked at all systems and yes, it's a treatment I would have myself. Why? Well, all skin loses elasticity and tonicity as we age, hence it's a great preventative treatment for women who want a natural lift, without surgery and injections.

In my personal situation, I've utilised it with a combination of anti-wrinkle treatments and skin peeling."
